DECLARATION OF HUGHES SANONER PURSUANT TO 37 C.F.R. § 1.132.

Dear Sir:

I, Hughes Sanoner, declare that:

1. I am the President and Chief Executive Officer of Solar Wide Industrial Ltd. ("Solar Wide"), which develops, manufactures, markets and sells consumer electronic products such as the electronic drinking mug disclosed in the above-identified application.

2. I am a co-inventor of the invention defined by the claims pending in the above-identified application.

3. I worked with Jacob Rothman, a co-inventor of the above-identified application, to conceive and reduce to practice the electronic drinking mug claimed in the above-identified application.

4. In consideration of one dollar and other good and valuable consideration, Jacob Rothman assigned all right, title and interest in and to the above-identified application to Solar Wide. The assignment was executed on November 2, 2001 and was recorded in the United States Patent and Trademark Office on February 5, 2002 at Reel 12616, Frames 0559-0562. A copy of the assignment and the Notice of Recordation is enclosed herewith in attached Exhibit A.

5. In consideration of one dollar and other good and valuable consideration, I also assigned all right, title and interest in and to the above-identified application to Solar Wide. A copy of the assignment is also provided in attached Exhibit A.

HS

6. Solar Wide sells the electronic drinking mug disclosed in the above-identified application under the trademark SMART MUGTM. A copy of a Solar Wide advertisement for the Smart Mug electronic drinking mug is provided in attached Exhibit B.

7. To date, Solar Wide has sold over 99,000 Smart Mug electronic drinking mugs. It is believed that this tremendous commercial success is the result of the new and unique features found in the Smart Mug electronic drinking mug including a) an integrally attached user interface that is accessible and visible when the mug is positioned in a cup holder, b) an interface that enables a user to select a desired temperature for heating a liquid to an exact temperature, and c) a LED panel including a series of light emitting diodes that provide a rapid indication of whether the liquid in the mug is at room temperature, lukewarm, hot or very hot.

8. After he assigned the above-identified application to Solar Wide, Jacob Rothman, doing business as JLR Gear, 24 West Scotts Avenue, Stockton, CA 95203, began to make and sell a knock-off electronic drinking mug that is an exact copy of the electronic drinking mug disclosed and claimed in the above-identified application.

9. JLR Gear has sold 250,000 units of the knock-off electronic drinking mug in 2003 and equal amounts are expected to be sold in the year 2004. A copy of an article supporting the number of sales of the knock-off mug is provided in attached Exhibit C.

10. A copy of an advertisement for JLR Gear's knock-off electronic drinking mug is provided in attached Exhibit D. Although the JLR Gear advertisement specifically states that it is not the manufacturer of the Smart Mug electronic drinking mug, nor does it buy its mug from Solar Wide, the advertisement promotes many of the features covered by the claims of the above-identified application.

11. The advertisement provided in attached Exhibit D is evidence that JLR Gear recognizes Solar Wide's ownership of intellectual property related to the Smart Mug electronic drinking mug.

12. The advertisement provided in Exhibit D touts the features found in the knock-off mug sold by JLR Gear. These features and benefits includes the following: a) an individual may use the knock-off electronic drinking mug to establish a temperature for a beverage, b) an individual can set a "perfect temperature" as desired, c) the mug will alert a user when the desired "perfect temperature" has been reached, d) the temperature of the liquid is continuously monitored by the electronic drinking mug and e) the temperature of the liquid is displayed on the LED indicator. The advertisement in Exhibit D also shows that the knock-off mug can be placed in a cup holder of an automobile with the user interface being accessible above the cup holder.

13. The undersigned declares that the knock-off mug sold by JLR Gear is an exact copy of the mug shown and described in the above-identified application.

14. JLR Gear is selling its knock-off electronic drinking mug at numerous retail establishments and websites including Target, giftsense.com, shoplifestyle.com and ebay.com. Copies of advertisements for these retail and website sales is provided in attached Exhibit E.

15. JLR Gear has achieved significant commercial success selling the knockoff electronic drinking mug. As indicated in the article provided in attached Exhibit B, JLR Gear has sold 250,000 units of the knock-off electronic drinking mug.

16. As indicated in the JLR Gear advertising provided in Exhibit D, the electronic drinking mug claimed in the above-identified application is an advance over the prior art because it includes a controller that enables a user to heat a liquid to an exact desired temperature and it includes an integrally attached user interface that enables a user to establish an exact preferred temperature. The product has also enjoyed significant success because it is mobile and can be placed in a cup holder of an automobile, with the user interface being accessible at an upper end of the mug. The LED panel also provides a quick indication of whether the liquid in the mug is at room temperature, lukewarm, hot or very hot. All of these features and/or benefits are recited in one or more claims of the above-identified application.

17. I hereby declare that all statements made herein of my own knowledge are true and that all statements made on information and belief are believed to be true; and further that these statements were made with the knowledge that willful false statements and the like so made are punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, under Section 1001 of Title 18 of the United States Code and that any such willful false statements may jeopardize the validity of the present patent application or any patent issuing thereon.

Electric Mug Could Overheat

Smart Mug Refunds, Replacements Available For Faulty Mugs

POSTED: 3:37 p.m. EST January 12, 2004
 UPDATED: 5:29 p.m. EST January 12, 2004

CLEVELAND -- The Smart Mug was a very popular gift this past holiday season. The electronic mug is supposed to keep your coffee hot. But in a consumer alert report, Troubleshooter Chris Caswell reported how one Brooklyn woman says the mug overheated.

Every morning, Karen Carson brews her husband a pot of coffee. To keep it warm while he's out on the road, she bought him a Smart Mug from JLR Gear.

"It keeps his coffee at a consistent temperature instead of keeping it in his thermos where it does grow cold," said Carson.

It was tough to find this popular item for a Christmas present, but she was able to get her hands on one.

Carson's husband plugged it into his car's adapter outlet, set the temperature on "very hot."

"As he was driving down the highway, it began to smoke and he smelled it burning," said Carson.

The wiring even melted the mug's plastic.

"I thought I had to contact you right away to let consumers be aware this mug could potentially overheat," Carson told NewsChannel5.

The JLR group said it sold a 250,000 of these mugs, but only received three calls about them burning up while in use.

JRL Gear told NewsChannel5 that its engineers are looking into the problem with the few mugs that were returned. If you're having a similar problem with the smart mug, send it back with a request for a replacement mug or a refund.

The company hasn't made any plans to recall the mug yet.

Product Description

Keep your coffee, tea or cocoa hot during long commutes and summer road trips with the Smart Mug. It plugs into your car's lighter/power socket, keeping your beverage heated to the exact temperature you select, between 85-160°F. The non-skid rubber base helps keep mug in place while the safety cap minimizes leakage if a spill occurs. Holds 16 oz. and features a removable liner for easy cleaning. Imported.

I own one of these mugs from a different retailer. My car has separate power and lighter outlets. The mug works erratically and improperly while plugged into the lighter outlet, but just fine when plugged into the separate power outlet. Have no idea why. The product description indicates the power/lighter outlets to be interchangeable or equivalent, but possibly its not so.

I got one for Christmas too. The controls on the first one didn't work. The whole bottom began melting. I caught it before it caught fire when I noticed a smoky smell. I took the first back and got another. The second one worked one time and then quit.

Reviewer: Carol T. Lambert from Clinton Township, MI United States

I recently received this item for Christmas....the first one I got did not work at all...the second one stopped working after three uses...I am currently using a third one and it does not control the temperature at all. It is very dangerous since the temperature on the coffee just keeps getting hotter and hotter. I almost burned myself on it today. I will be returning this item and will not try a fourth one. Three strikes and you're out! I would not recommend this item to anyone. It does not work properly and is very, very dangerous and could cause serious injury. I am very disappointed in its performance.

Description

Quoted From The New York Times (5/17/02).

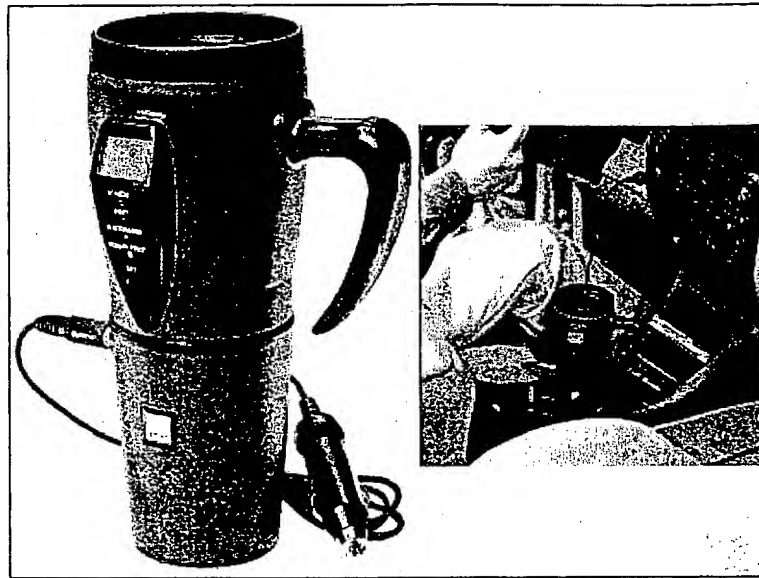

"If you are going solo, skip the coffee maker in favor of the thermostatically controlled Smart Mug. This high-tech cup looks like a souvenir from a NASA mission. You set the temperature on a switch panel, and the liquid's status is displayed on an L.E.D. indicator.

Plug it into the dashboard and 16 ounces of coffee - or tea, hot chocolate or soup - will hit the near-boiling point in seconds.

Through a retailer ... the Smart Mug was $79.95 It is also useful for warming formula."
